80 GRADUATES TO HEAR OTIS

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT WILL BE TOMORROW MORNING.

CLASS PLAY TONIGHT

Exercises for Week Will Close With Annual Alumni Banquet Tomorrow at Residence Hall.

Annual commencement exercises at the State Teachers College will be held in the College auditorium at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, when a class of eighty seniors who will receive the bachelors degree in either art or science will be graduated. Some of these seniors will not receive their degrees until after the summer quarter at the College, but they will join in the commencement tomorrow.

Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis of Kansas City will deliver the address tomorrow. Judge Otis is well known in Maryville, being a native of Nodaway County and a graduate of the local high school. The subject of his address is not known.

The academic procession, which will be participated in by seniors and the faculty of the College, will form at 9:30 o'clock at the Residence Hall. The faculty of the College has voted not to wear caps and gowns at the commencement exercises.

Miss Helen Dvorak, instructor in the Conservatory of Music at the College, will pay "Second Concerto," Vieuxtemps after the candidates for degrees march into the auditorium. Thomas H. Annett, Conservatory faculty member, will play the "Marche Militaire."

Following the address, the class will be presented by George H. Colbert, dean of the faculty, and the degrees will be conferred by Uel W. Lamkin, president of the College.

The last number on the commencement program will be the singing of the school song, "Alma Mater."

The class play, "Dear Brutus," will be given in the College auditorium tonight. This is the play made famous by Wiliam Gillette in New York City. The pay is a sort of satirical fantasy by Sir James M. Barrie and deals with the second chance which so many people wish for.

The play is a difficult one. Should it be presented creditably tonight, it woud be laurels for cast and directors alike. Misses Blanche H. Dow and Laveta McClanahan have taken turns directing the play.

The final event of commencement week will be at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night when the annual aumni banquet will be held at the Residence Hall.

A luncheon in honor of Judge Otis will be given at the Country Club at noon tomorrow.

BANK CLOSED BY DIRECTORS

NORTHWESTERN BANK OF BURLINGTON JUNCTION FAILS TO OPEN.

IRREGULARITIES FOUND

Directors Find Faults in Accounts of R. N. Barber, Cashier.—Total Deposits Near $127,000.

Irregularities in the accounts kept by the cashier, Robert N. Barber, caused the board of directors of the Northwestern Bank at Burlington Junction to fail to open for business this morning. The notice on the bank door this morning stated simply:

"This bank is closed by order of the board of directors."

The irregularities were discovered yesterday and the board of directors decided upon the closing as they did not know the full extent and nature of such irregularities. Mr. Barber has been cashier of the Northwestern Bank for a number of years. T. A. Corken of Burlington Junction is president, having been selected a few years ago.

One of the directors of the bank stated that the bank's total deposits are between $126,000 and $127,000, bills payable are $25,000, capital $25,000, surplus $12,000, and its loans about $171,000.

Until the extent of the irregularities and the loss to the bank is determined, it will not be known whether or not the bank will re-open. The bank held a surety bond which should lessen and possibly may cover the loss.

R. E. Shelby, bank examiner in charge of the Real Estate Bank, here, was notified of the action of the board of directors and notified the State Finance Department. Mr. Shelby will go to Burlington Junction tomorrow, as he has practically completed his work here.

An extension of Maryville's "white way" to include the block on West Second street between Main and Buchanan has been practically assured by agreement of the property owners and the members of the City Council.

The property owners will pay for the lighting standards, the light company will install them and the city will pay for the current, according to the present plan. It calls for four standards on each side of the street.

QUITMAN CASH STORE ROBBED

MERCHANDISE VALUED AT $1,000 STOLEN LAST NIGHT.

ALL DRESSES TAKEN

Thieves, Entering Through Back Door, Also Haul Off Knives, Shoes, Cheese, Even Pop.

Merchandise valued at $1,000 or more was stolen last night from the Community Cash Store at Quitman sometime between midnight and 5 a. m.

The robbers gained entrance by breaking a corner of the glass in a back door and then slipping a bolt. They are believed to have used an automobile, either a pleasure car or a truck, in which to carry away the loot.

A small amount of money was taken from the cash register. The merchandise taken included women's dresses, pocket knives, silver ware, cigars, cigarettes, two whole cheeses and a half, bacon, minced ham, pop, automobile tires and tubes, shoes, hose, caps shirts, ties, bolt goods and other things.

The thieves made a clean sweep of the rack containing the women's dresses. They took all the store's pocket knives except three. Apparently they made a more careful selection of shoes, as rejected pairs were scattered over the store when the robbery was discovered this morning.

The Community Cash Store is owned by Fred Wright of this city and Earl and Joe McDonald. They had no theft insurance.

The first indication that anything was wrong was noticed about 5 o'clock this morning, when Edgar Jones, who lives nearby, saw that the back door was open. He decided, however, that the store had been opened earlier than usual, and it was not until Earl McDonald arrived a short time later that the alarm was given.

Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell visited the scene early this morning and has notified the officers of surrounding counties.

Practically all of the goods carried the store's price marks, and some of them, especially those on the knives will be difficult to remove.

Those who have subscribed to this fund for cemetery road work are requested to pay their donations at once by leaving the money at Price Furniture Company.

The work started at the Engelmann Greenhouses and will go as far as St. Mary's cemetery.

Man Is Charged With Forging Three Checks

Farm Hand, Known Variously As William Byrd, Walter Brown, Ray Gibson and Baird, Is Arrested.

William Byrd, who is said to have used also the names of Walter Brown, Ray Gibson and Baird, was arrested this morning by Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell and Barney Dougan, city marshal, on a charge of forgery. The arrest was made at the Frank T. Hall farm, west of Maryville, where Byrd commenced work yesterday morning as a farm hand.

Byrd is charged with passing a check at Townsend's, forging the name of John W. Bookman of this city. At Yehle's store, he is alleged to have forged a check for $35, signing the name of Ray Gibson and giving his address as Savannah. A bogus check for $35 on a bank in Kansas was cashed for Byrd by J. H. Tapp, south of Maryville. These offenses took place several weeks ago and the officers here have been watching for Byrd.

Byrd is also wanted at several places in Kansas for forgery. At Alma, Kan., he went under the name of Byrd, Brown and Baird. The sheriff there stated to Sheriff Campbell that they were anxious to get Byrd and that the Kansas officials were sure he would get thirty years in the penitentiary.

HIGHER COURT BLOCKS MOVE

SUPREME COURT DENIES WRIT ASKED BY ATTORNEY.

SLAYER IS RELEASED

Pine Bluff, Ark., Man Convicted and Then Released on Payment of $500 Fine.

Jefferson City, May 25.—The Missouri Supreme Court today denied a writ of prohibition asked by Circuit Attorney Sidiner of St. Louis, who sought to stay an order issued by Circuit Judge Mix excluding Sidiner from the grand jury room while Attorney-General Gentry makes an investigation of the Rutherford-Tucker case.

The decision of the court probably will permit the investigation of circumstances under which Rutherford was freed of the slaying of Jack Tucker, St. Louis bellboy, on the payment of a fine of $500.

St. Louis, May 25.—Circuit Attorney Sidiner, with an attorney, was in Jefferson City today to ask the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition against the investigation of Attorney-General Gentry into the case of Lieut. William Allen Scott Rutherford of Pine Bluff, Ark., slayer of Jack Tucker, bell boy, released on payment of $500 fine.

Sidiner bases his complaint on the contention that Judge Mix had no authority to order a grand jury investigation into which the state has entered on order of Governor Sam A. Baker.

While an issuance of a writ of prohibition would stop the investigation, it was reported that Judge Mix would ask that the fine be set aside and thus the case would be reopened.

MANY KILLED IN ERUPTION

JAPANESE VOLCANO, MT. TOKACHI IS ACTIVE.

WATER IS DEVASTATING

Japanese Troops Sent to Stricken District to Rescue Marooned and Give Relief.

Tokio, May 25.—Fifty persons are dead and two hundred homes have been destroyed by an eruption of Mt. Tokachi, according to an official communique issued by the governor of Hokkaido province in which the disaster occurred.

The communique admitted, however, that the number of casualties is likely to increase as more detailed reports are received.

A dispatch here said 150 were dead but the papers estimated the dead considerably higher.

Many who are reported missing are probably safe, according to advises received here.

The eruption of Mt. Tokachi occurred Sunday afternoon. The volcanic action is apparently inconsequental but caused a mountain lake to break its embankment.

A fifty-foot wall of water swept down through hamlets and farms. A village was entirely destroyed. It is estimated that two thousand refugees have been driven to the hills.

The crop damage throughout the stricken district will be large. Japanese troops have been sent to the scene of the disaster to rescue the marooned and carry relief to the homeless.

Oklahoma City, May 25.—Direct connections with Pacific Coast air mail planes will be available within the next thirty days by revision of the schedule so that Dallas to Chicago planes will make direct connections with the west-bound ships, according to A. S. Sisler, chief of the U. S. air mail bureau, here today on an inspection of the southwest contract route.

With the arrival of fifty new planes, the service will be greatly improved, Sisler added.

Water Drained From College Pool Today

The swimming pool in the new gymnasium at the State Teachers College was drained today. Although this is the first time since the pool was first filled that it had been completely emptied, the water was still clear and pure, according to H. Frank Lawrence, athletic director at the institution.

A corps of men scrubbed the sides and bottom of the pool after it was drained. Later this week the tank will be refilled. It holds better than 50,000 gallons.

Bill Provides for Forest Reserves

Washington, May 26.—The establishment of a national forest reserve and a migratory bird reserve in every state in the Union was proposed by Representative Burger, socialist of Wisconsin.

The 820 million acres of forest land, originally contained in the continental United States, Burger said, has been reduced to 138 million acres by reason of "American carelessness."

H. L. Raines is in Kansas City today on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Scadden and family of Parnell left today for Torrington, Wyo., where they will make their future home.

Oil Lease Appeals Would Be Dismissed

Walsh Bill Amends Code of District of Columbia Court To Prohibit Such Action.

Washington, May 25.—The appeals taken by Edward L. Doheny, multimillionaire oil man, and Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of Interior, on an indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the government, would be dismissed immediately under a bill passed by the Senate today. Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, famous oil prosecutor, was the author of the measure, which would amend the legal code of the District of Columbia court to prohibit such appeals as those taken by Doheny and Fall.

The new law would become retroactive and would include the Fall and Doheny appeals. The bill must be enacted by the House before it becomes a law but Walsh announced he anticipated no trouble in the lower branch.

ORDERS PROBE OF DRY ORDER

SENATE COMMITTEE TO DETERMINE CONSTITUTIONALITY.

WALSH DEFENDS BILL

Upholds Right Of Coolidge In Recent Prohibition Move.—President Reiterates His Right to Issue It.

Washington, May 25.—Topping the storm of opposition aroused by President Coolidge's executive order making state officers eligible to serve as federal dry agents, the Senate, this afternoon, ordered a formal investigation of the order to determine the constitutionality.

Without a record vote, the Senate adopted the King resolution authorizing the judiciary committee to conduct an inquiry and to report whether the order was "within the legal power of the executive."

The way was opened for enactment of a bill prohibiting the President to issue such an order and to prohibit the employment of state officers as dry agents. An amendment was added to the resolution at the instance of administration leaders.

It was explained that the investigation would be conducted in the interest of such legislation.

Washington, May 25.—In the face of almost overwhelming Republican opposition, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat of Montana, a dry leader, arose in the Senate this afternoon and defended the legal right of President Coolidge to issue a prohibition order, pinning federal badges on state officers.

Walsh declared that the President was wholly within his rights. He said that he had delayed coming to the defense of Mr. Coolidge, waiting for some one on the Republican side.

"I see no grounds whatever for the criticism directed at the President," Walsh said.

Washington, May 25.—President Coolidge stoutly defended the executive order which permits the employment of state, county and municipal officers as federal dry agents.

He told callers at the White House this afternoon that the order, which was signed upon the recommendation of the treasury department, was perfectly legal.

He said, however, that the order would not be applied generally or used oppressively. If it is found that it is oppressive, the White House spokesman said it would be modified.

VICTORY FOR FRENCH IDEA

CONTENTION IGNORED

League of Nations Drafting Commission to Submit Report in Full This Afternoon.

Geneva, May 25.—France scores a victory and the United States gets a rebuff in a report of the drafting commission of the League of Nations disarmament preparatory commission, it was learned today.

The drafting commission will submit its report to the full commission this afternoon and it was learned that it approves the French contention that disarmament is only realizable in proportion to securities.

The report ignores the contention of the United States that the question of military and naval disarmament be separated.

The report will also outline a number of questions for the consideration of the technical military sub-committee.

France has scored almost a complete victory in the drafting commission and there are indications that it will find considerable support before the full commission.

Russell Scott Wins a Temporary Victory

Granted Sanity Trial By Chicago Judge—He May Be Recommitted To State Hospital.

Chicago, May 25.—Russell Scott today won a victory—temporarily at least—in his long fight to escape the gallows.

Judge William Brothers ruled that Scott be tried by a jury to determine his sanity. If he is found sane, he is to be hanged. If insane, he will be recommitted to the state hospital at Chester, Ill.

Scott once previously was tried by a jury as to his sanity. The jury in that case found him insane and Scott, by the jury's verdict, for the third time, escaped the noose. Twice previously he had been saved by court decisions.

Farm Problems Are Vital, Jardine Says

Secretary of Agriculture Believes Government Should Offer Aid—Situation Unchanged.

New York, May 25.—Farmers are struggling with a disparity between their receipts and their costs, their debts and fixed charges, and the government, through legislation, must come to their aid, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine declared here today.

"These basic difficulties are a serious drag on agriculture and a menace to stability of business generally," Jardine said.

"Agriculture is entitled to legislative consideration of its basic difficulties and in the long run is bound to get it."

Jardine said that the defeat of the Haugen bill in the House last week has not changed the agricultural situation.

LAPSED SOLDIER INSURANCE.

People who like to run down the reasons for things have a problem worth tackling in the fact that nearly 4,000,000 World War veterans have let their government insurance policies lapse. These policies are valued at $33,500,000,000.

This soldier insurance was cheap and absolutely safe. The government makes no profit on it.

The indifference to government insurance surely is not due to indifference to insurance itself. The total amount of life insurance outstanding in the United States at this time is estimated at over $60,000,000,000. It is likely that a good many of those 4,000,000 veterans who let their government policies lapse have bought and are carrying insurance sold them by private companies.

Is it true that in a competitive market, government insurance, no matter how profitable and cheap, cannot overcome the advantage of the private companies with their highly trained selling organization. Do we have to have an expensive salesman persuade us to purchase something we know we need? Or is it possible that the government did not make its plan sufficiently clear and that if it had been better understood it would have been better patronized.

There may be any number of reasons for this strange situation. However, the government insurance is as good as ever, and the drive of the United States Veterans Bureau to revive as many as possible of those lapsed policies deserves widespread support. After July 2, 1926, most of the policies will be permanently voided unless they are taken up again before then.

SOMETHING ABOUT SAVING.

Did you ever stop to think how much more fun it would be to watch little savings grow and figure the totals every once in a while than to be forever bothering about how to stand off the bill collector another month? And do you know that every man with a regular job who really wants to can be saving something if he has no hospital or unusual obligations to meet?

It may seem slow at the beginning but that is the way practically all rich men started—by small savings to start with and judicious use of the money afterward. Make it earn something. These little earnings are the difference between substantial wealth and nothing. For instance, at the rate of a dollar a day, it would take 2740 years to same a million dollars, but the same dollar a day drawing six and one-half per cent interest, compounded semi-annually, will reach a million dollars in 81 years. We don't have to have a million dollars but the same rule applies on shorter terms.

Note these results. Only $10 per month, about 40 cents per day, deposited monthly for 80 months, will amount to $1,000; $20 will amount to $2,000; $25 to $2,500; $50 to $5,000 and so on. According to the above figures, a dollar a day for each working day would make a nice little nest egg of $2,600 in 89 months and two dollars a day would mean a nice home all paid for. Its an interesting thing to think about.

HONEY FROM COTTON.

The South, it is claimed, can learn something about cotton from California. The South has had cotton for so many years that producing the fleecy has become very much of a fixed habit in this section, and it was thought that we knew about all there was to know worth while about cotton and its by-products. But it has devolved upon California to tell us that we have been letting our bees overlook a fine opportunity. There is nothing like doing an old thing in a new country to find out new things about it. Central California, depressed by low prices for dried fruits, has begun to raise cotton. And now it is discovered that the cotton blossom makes a very good white honey. So we have not merely cotton cloth, cotton cattle feed, but cotton honey. Stalk, root, fiber, seed and blossom, all are useful, if we have the enterprise to use them. But in regard to honey, it may be the South has not been losing much after all, except through not having more bees than we have. Perhaps Southern bees long ago discovered that cotton blossoms would yield the sweetness they sought for honey. Possibly one reason why Southern honey is of such fine flavor during cotton blossoming time is because the bees have been to the cotton fields.—Anniston, (Ala.) Star.

Asked to Call Special Session of Legislature

Constitutional Amendment in Kansas Would Speed Up Road Program By Two Years.

Kansas City, Mo., May 25.—In order to speed up the Kansas good roads program Governor Ben S. Paulen of Kansas will be requested to call a special session of the legislature at a meeting with representatives of the Kansas Chamber of Commerce in Topeka Tuesday.

This was the indication taken from a statement made by H. A. Russell of Fort Scott, director of publicity for the Kansas Chamber, who said the road situation in Kansas is critical and that favorable action regarding constitutional amendment at this time would save two years on the state's road program.

"Kansas must have a constitutional amendment giving the state the power to initiate road improvement before the state can get a system of connected all-year roads, Russell said while stopping here.

Russell set forth the opinion of the Kansas Chamber of Commerce which believes the cost of a special session of the legislature would be a small matter compared to the vast saving made possible by advancement of the state program by two full years.

Earliest Races of Men Inhabited Missouri Ozarks, Says Roy Godsey

Roy Godsey, of Jefferson City, formerly a resident here, who is fast gaining a wide reputation as a student and writer of Missouri history, delivered an address over Radio station WOS recently on his "pet" subject, pre-historic Missouri.

His speech in part follows:

"A history of Missouri manifestly would be incomplete without some attempt to record the evidence of a prehistoric race and of the early mound-builders and cliff dwellers, and for this reason I call attention to the caves, tunneled caverns and some 66,000 mounds existing in Missouri which hold their secrets of unrecorded and unknown races or nations of people.

"It is admitted by well-known authorities that many of the mounds in both central and southeast Missouri were built by a strange people, man-like in form and savage in their nature. Also by careful search in the Ozark caves and rock-shelters interesting specimens such as implements of war, household vessels and utensils have been found which are taken to have belonged to a race of people who fought battles before the time of Christ and hunted mastodons and Cambrian mammals in Missouri ten thousand years before the coming of the so-called North American Indian into Missouri territory. And the coming of the Indian to Missouri is believed to have occurred some five or six thousand years before the birth of Christ, when, as paint-daubed aborigines they emigrated from Siberia, China and various sections of Europe to the North American continent by the way of the Behring Sea, which then was narrow and easily could be crossed by raft in summer or on the solid ice in winter.

A Bone 12,000 Years Old.

"At Jacob's Cavern in Pineville, in Southwest Missouri, has been found a carved bone which is said to have been left there by a people who inhabited the earth not less than twelve thousand years ago.

"And four miles south of Delaware Ford on James River in Christian county the river shore is fringed with overhanging limestone cliffs. These cliffs are fluted with ledges and tunneled by caverns. Certain implements of war and bits of pottery have been taken from these cliffs which are accepted as evidence of a stage of human occupation in Missouri which seems to antedate the North American Indian, perhaps some three or four thousand years.

"To complete evidence of a prehistoric race in Missouri as well as to establish facts concerning a race of cliff dwellers to make intensive and expensive surveys. Great depths must be explored to know the facts of human industry. But specimens already unearthed from various mounds, taken from deep excavations and caves have added zest to the interest of Missouri antiquities. So far no systematic exploration of Missouri mounds and caves has ever been undertaken.

Few of Mounds Opened.

"Only a few of the thousands of Missouri mounds have been opened by speculators dreaming that they might find hidden in these dumb memorials of the past gold or jewels. But instead of gold and jewels there has been brought forth earthenware and vessels, many of them showing an intimate relation with the early races which inhabited old Mexico and Central America many centuries ago. Often the ancient sites of villages and cemeteries, overgrown with timber, were cleared and turned into corn, wheat and cotton fields, and for years in many instances, fragments of the potter's art of Missouri's earliest people have been turned up annually in the furrow.

"The history of Missouri's most ancient races remains to be written and there is a wealth of proof that perhaps the earliest race of men occupied the Missouri Ozarks and the level regions that border these highlands on the east and the north."

SAYS SCIENCE BINDS WORLD

COOLIDGE WELCOMES PAN-AMERICAN RED CROSS MEET.

GOOD WILL ESSENTIAL

Tolerance Between Nations Necessary to Keep Pace With Scientific Activities, He Says.

Washington, May 25.—An international relationship, based on the broad and fundamental principles of tolerance and good will is essential in the social organization of the world, and it is necessary to keep pace with the human activities in science, President Coolidge declared today in formally welcoming to Washington the second Pan-American Red Cross conference.

"The application of scientific discoveries to communication, to transportation and to industry has bound the countries of the world together to a degree our forefathers never did expect," the President said.

"The interchange of agriculture and industry, of ideas and ideals and the progress of scientific research has profoundly revolutionized not only the routine of life in every country but also the character of international intercourse.

"In the past, the history of international differences between nations. Diplomatic intercourse has had as its chief purpose the settling of such differences. In the daily routine of life's problems, matters arise in national interests in which many seem to differ."

Says Government's Big Need Is Congress

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Washington—What is wrong with the government?

"Congress," answers Congressman Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma.

Then while thousands of critical fellow-citizens are agreeing with him, he puts the reverse English on his diagnosis by objecting that there is too little Congress in the government rather than too much. He believes that Congress, as the people's own chosen right arm, is the hope of the nation.

"But Congress is the greatest buck-passing institution on earth," says Thomas.

"When there is hard work or a new problem ahead, does Congress tackle the job itself? Certainly not. It creates a bureau or board or commission and delegates to it some of its own vital authority. The present session promises to add half a dozen extra bureaus. We are getting a government by bureaus instead of by the people."

Thomas' conversation in truth and in fact is more than just a western congressman attracting attention to himself. It is the conviction of one who has taken part actively in public life ever since he made speeches, as a 19-year-old schoolboy, in the free silver campaign of '96. He is discussing here the rather sweeping resolution he introduced recently to investigate the government.

He proposes, in brief, that a committee considers the present mood of the nation for introspection and destructive criticism. This committee would ask the same question to which he is giving his own answer, inquiring of Ex-president Taft, ex-presidential candidates, ex-judges, ex-governors and others who qualify as "elder statesmen."

Being in debt isn't even an interesting experience.

Calls Advertising a Field of Opportunity

Merle E. Selecman Tells College Students There Still Is Much Room For "Top-Notchers."

"There is a distinct opportunity in the field of advertising for the individual who is content with a modest beginning and who is willing to accept a plentitude of work, worry, and toil in order to have a position of success in the future," declared Merle Selecman, managing editor of the Green and White Courier in a short talk this morning to a group of advertising students at the State Teachers College.

"There are many mediocre advertising men but not many top notchers," he continued. "There are many mediocre advertising men in top notch positions and receiving top notch salaries because there are not enough top notch men to go around.

"We hear a lot about rendering service today. Most college students want to get into a field in which there is opportunity to serve. I think that in the field of advertising you will find an opportunity to serve. It renders service by making people conversant with things which will make them happier, live better, live longer and enjoy life."

He also spoke of the extensive educational work being done by advertisers, telling of new uses and better uses for their goods.

In his "close-up" of the opportunities in the field of advertising, he traced the probable advancement of an enterprising young man who entered the business. He showed how he was assigned to smaller jobs first and was graduated to handling bigger jobs.

Mr. Selecman also brought out the tremendous importance of advertising in modern business.

Cat Owners Asked to Keep Them Up

Common House Variety Is Greatest Menace to Breeding Birds, Says Izaak Walton League.

An appeal to owners of cats to keep them from roaming at large, at least during the breeding season for birds, was issued today by Fred W. Smith, secretary of the local chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America.

"Once more the breeding season of the birds has arrived," says the appeal. "Those of our resident birds which have survived the winter need all the protection we can give them. The migratory birds should have equal consideration in order that we may keep faith with Canada under our Migratory Bird Treaty, and with our kinsmen in the South, who have protected them in the wintering zone.

"The greatest single living agency in the destruction of the birds is the roaming, unrestrained house cat. We appreciate the practical difficulties connected with keeping cats under close restraint throughout the entire year, but if every owner of a cat will keep it under restraint during the period from May 15 to August 15, great mortality among our birds will be avoided.

"We ask you to make it certain that your cat is so controlled, and that you co-operate with your local officials and societies organized for the purpose, to see that all homeless and wild hunting cats are humanely killed."

Pre-School Children Neglected, Is Claim

Physician Says Years Between Infancy And First Grade Are Most Dangerous.

By C. W. BANNER, M. D.
(Member Gorgas Memorial Institute).

Chicago, May 25.—That thousands and thousands of children in "the years between" are actually neglected will surprise many parents because of the fact that children are receiving more attention than in any era in our history.

Before birth the mother is given attention and care. The family doctor, with periodic examinations, keeps himself informed as to her condition. After the baby is born the doctor and nurse continue their watchfulness for several months more, until the little stranger is well started in a healthful life.

This usually lasts for about a year, when much of this watchful care seems to relax and many children are neglected until they arrive at the school age, when they are examined again, by the school physician. If defects of tonsils, teeth, heart or lungs are found he notifies the parents to take the youngster to their family physician.

What I am trying to do in this article is to call your attention to "those years between," between one and six when our watchfulness seems to relax in so many cases. It is in this period that the seeming trival indispositions of the child are dismissed, with little attention, because it is thought to be caused by something the child has eaten. A dose of purgative may be given or the indisposition is attributed to cutting teeth which actually seldom gives any trouble of consequence.

These years between are the years it seems to me, that should have our most watchful care. This is the period when so many of our organs and functions of the body are undergoing rapid changes. The first set of teeth is out and the second set in process of formation. The stomach and elementary canal are preparing for the changed diet that is soon to be required, and this is when errors of diet are so frequently disastrous.

This is also the period when most children contact contagious diseases of childhood such as measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and diphtheria.

Let's get away from the idea that every fever that you detect in your child is due to something that he has eaten and only needs a physic for correction, or that any abnormality, noted, will soon be outgrown. Do not guess about such things. Expert advice is needed to save your child from some permanent injury and yourself a lifelong regret for having neglected what seemed to you a trival ailment.

Demonstration School Pupils Study Violin Playing Each Monday Morning

Monday morning may be Blue Monday for lots of folks but it is everything else but that for twenty-six enthusiastic youngsters in the College demonstration school.

These youngsters are having the time of their lives, for most of them it is the novel experience of taking class lessons in violin. Miss Helen Dvorak of the College Conservatory faculty is conducting this class. The College purchased four three-quarter sized violins and four full-sized violins, all good instruments, and this instruction is given free of charge.

Yesterday morning when a reporter dropped into the room, two youngsters, not more than 8 years old, were standing before the class, playing. With a pail instead of a pair of violins, they might have been taken for Jack and Jill, this black haired, dark-eyed, little miss in the pink dress and the fuzzy-headed, bashful boy in the blue overalls. Violins up in place, bows in the proper position, back and forth over the strings these little hands carried them to the one-two-three-four, of the teacher. The rest of the class listened, each wondering if his turn were coming next.

Regular lessons are assigned by Miss Dvorak and a rotation system permits each pupil to take an instrument home with him at least one night a week. At the end of the term a grade is made out for each pupil the same as in reading or geography. The pupils in this class come from the fourth grade and up. There are thirteen boys and thirteen girls in the class.

"The object of the class," said Miss Mary Keith, in charge of the demonstration school, "is to create an interest in the violin and to discover unusual talent. Such talent has been found in several instances and these and other children are enrolling for private lessons with Miss Dvorak this summer." The classwork is unusual, Miss Keith says. Superior training is gained and the classwork has advantages in ear training and in judging one's own work in comparison to that of others. Enthusiastic interest has been shown by every member of the class.

New York Cops Given Armed Motorcycles

New York—A new armored motorcycle, which the makers claim will revolutionize the present system of pursuing automobile bandits, was inspected recently at Police Headquarters by Police Commissioner McLaughlin and his aides.

Both the motorcycle and its side-car are completely protected with steel shields, in which are set bullet-proof glass panels. Bending low behind these shields both the operator and his companion are completely protected from bullets, and at the same time are able to operate the motorcycle and direct revolver or rifle shots at their quarry.

The motorcycle has a speed of 70 miles an hour and the manufacturers claim the machine will be more effective in the pursuit of bandits than the present high-powered automobiles used by the department, because of the ease with which the motorcycle can be manuevered in heavy traffic.

Oliver October

By George Barr McCutcheon

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Oliver October Baxter, Ja., was born on a vile October day. His parents were prominent in the commercial, social and spiritual life of the town of Rumley. His father was proprietor of the hardware store. The night that Oliver October was born a gypsy queen reads his father's fortune and tells him what a wonderful future his son has before him, but after the reading, the gypsy becomes angry and leaves the house in a rage after telling Mr. Baxter that his son will never reach the age of thirty, and he will be hanged for a crime of which he is not guilty.

CHAPTER II.—Ten years elapse and Oliver's father is the owner of a business block in the town. Mrs. Baxter died when Oliver was nearing seven. Josephine Sage, wife of the minister, causes a sensation when she leaves Rumley to go on the stage. She becomes a "star" and later goes to London, where she scores a hit. Her daughter, Jane, and young Oliver become greatly attached to one another. After finishing college, young Oliver accepts a position in Chicago with an engineering company. He goes to China on an important mission for him firm. Upon his return he enlists in the Canadian army.

Chapter III.—The war over, Oliver returns to Chicago and is told by his employers that his services are no longer required. He returns home. He hears Jane is in love with Doctor Lansing. Jane and Oliver meet again. Oliver is reprimanded by his father for not getting another position. Oliver threatens to leave home.

CHAPTER IV.

A Mysterious Disappearance.

Shortly before 3 o'clock on the afternoon of June 23, the day before Oliver October was to leave for Chicago and a new position, old Oliver Baxter stepped into the bank at the corner of Clay and Pershing streets and drew out $3,500 in currency. He gave no reason to the teller or to the cashier for the withdrawal of so large an amount in cash.

Oliver October, 10 or 15 minutes late for supper that evening, found his father in a surprisingly amiable frame of mind, but Mr. Baxter's good humor did not endure. He revived a dispute they had had in the store earlier in the day. The old man had that day offered him an interest in the business if he would remain in Rumley. Oliver was grateful, but he declined the offer, saying he had a profession in which he wanted to make good.

Mr. Baxter's reversion to the subject came when Oliver, looking at his watch, announced that he must be running along, as he was due over at the Sages to say good-by to Jane and her father.

"Well, I'll walk part of the way with you," said his father crossly. "I'd like to see if I can't coax you to change your mind about coming into the store. If you don't mind, we'll take the lower road along the swamp. It's a short cut for you—saves you a quarter of a mile or more."

A few minutes before 9 o'clock Oliver October appeared at the home of Rev. Mr. Sage, somewhat out of breath and visibly agitated.

"I'm awfully sorry to be so late," he apologized. "Father and I had a long and trying confab and I—I couldn't get away. God knows I hate to say it, but I'm glad I'm going tomorrow."

"No, you shouldn't say it, Oliver," said Mr. Sage. "Poor man, he is really not responsible these days. You see, Oliver, for nearly 30 years he has lived in dread of—well, of the absurd thing that gypsy woman said."

"And that is why he wants me to stay here, so he can watch over and protect me?"

"Exactly."

"If I really believed that to be the case, Uncle Herbert, I—I would stay."

Jane, who had been silent during the brief colloquy between her father and face intently. She was puzzled by his manner and by his expression.

"I came over by the back road, along the swamp," he explained, catching her in the act of staring at his muddy shoes. "Father walked part of the way with me. Gee, what a panning he gave me! It was terrible, Mr. Sage. I saw red. I—I had to run—I couldn't stand it. G—d, how miserable I am!"

Jane and her father listened, speechless and presently Mr. Sage arose and went into the house.

The clock on the town hall struck 12 before Oliver reluctantly bade Jane good-night and started homeward. On his way home, through the heart of town, he passed the rather pretentious house in which the Lansings lived. There were people on the broad veranda. He longed for the companionship of friends—merry friends. He turned in at the stone gate and walked swiftly up to the house.

"Hello, Ollie," called out Sammy Parr.

Young Lansing came to the top of the steps to greet him.

"I've been up saying good-by to Mr. Sage and Jane. And the funny part of it is that I may not go away tomorrow after all, said Oliver. "The Sages think I ought not to leave my father." He spoke in lowered tones, for Lansing's ear alone.

"I quite agree with them," said the other stiffly.

"Have a highball, Baxter?" called Sammy.

"Not tonight, thanks. I've got to be running along. Father may be waiting up for me. Night, everybody."

And he was off. The group watched him stride swiftly down the cement walk. Sammy was the first to speak.

"Well, I call that sociability, don't you? What the dickens is the matter with him? First time I've ever seen Ollie Baxter with a grouch."

Early the next morning, Serepta Grimes called Joseph Sikes on the telephone.

"Did Oliver Baxter stay all night with you?" she inquired. "I mean old Oliver."

"No."

"Have you seen anything of him this morning?"

"No. What's the matter, Serepty?"

"Well, he didn't sleep here last night, and there ain't a sign of him around the place. I—I guess maybe you'd better come up, Joe."

The long and the short of it was, Oliver Baxter had vanished as completely as if swallowed by the earth—and it was the general opinion that that was exactly what happened to him. There was not the slightest doubt in the minds of his horrified friends that he had wandered out upon the swamp and had met a ghastly fate in one of the countless pits of mire whose depths no man knew or cared to fathom, even in speculation.

Notwithstanding the almost universal belief that poor old Oliver Baxter was buried in the black mire of the swamp a state-wide search was at once instituted by his distracted son, who for one, did not believe that the missing man had gone to his death in the loathsome tract.

The bank's prompt announcement that Mr. Baxter had withdrawn thirty-five hundred dollars convinced Oliver October and a few sound-headed individuals that he had deliberately planned his departure from Rumley.

No one could be found who saw him after he took leave of his son on the swamp road. Oliver October related all that transpired between them on that moonlit byway. He did not spare himself in the recital. No one blamed him ,however.

An inspection of Mr. Baxter's closet the following morning led to a puzzling discovery. A comparatively new suit of dark gray material—rather too heavy for summer wear—was missing, while the wrinkled, well-worn garments that he wore daily at the store were found hanging in the closet.

The excitement in Rumley was intense. The Baxter home became a magnet that drew practically the entire population of the town to that section, and there was not an hour of the day that did not see scores of people trudging through the safer portions of the swamp or tramping along the uplands that bordered it.

Detectives from Chicago, brought down by Oliver October, agreed with the young man that his father had "skipped out," to use the expression of Michael O'Rourke. It was Mr. O'Rourke who advanced the theory that the old man had taken this amazing means of forcing his son to remain in Rumley.

"Why," said he, "it's as plain as the nose on your face. He is dead set on having you stick to this town. You say 'nix.' Well, what's the smartest thing he can do? The only way to make you stay in this town is for him to leave it. He sneaks off without letting anybody know where he's going. Why does he do that? If you or anybody else knew where he was you'd have him back here in no time, and all his trouble for nothing. He thought it all out before hand. Now he has his own way. You've got to stay here until he gets good and ready to come back. Somebody's gt to be in charge of his affairs. There is a chance, of course, that he wandered out in the swamp, but I don't believe it. If you want us to go ahead and rake the country for him, we'll do it."

"I want to find him," said Oliver, firmly. "You may be right in your surmise—I hope you are. But just the same, I don't intend to leave a stone unturned, Mr. O'Rourke."

But the days ran into weeks and the weeks into months, with the mystery no nearer solution than in the beginning—no word, no sign from the old man who had vanished, no clue that led to anything save disappointment. There was something grim, uncanny about the silence of old man Baxter—it was indeed the silence of the dead.

"He might as well be dead," was a remark that became common in Rumley whenever his case was discussed. Strangely enough, no one now believed him to be dead. Everybody agreed with the detective that the cantankerous old man had "skipped out" with the sole idea of frustrating his son's plan to return to Chicago.

Oliver October took charge of the store and, as self-appointed manager, conducted the business to the best of his ability. There was nothing in the young man's manner to indicate that he rebelled against the turn in his affairs. On the contrary, he took hold with an enthusiasm that left nothing to be desired by those who at first shook their heads dubiously over the situation.

"I am to blame for all this," he protested firmly. "If my father is dead, I am accountable for his death. Whatever his present condition may be, I am responsible for it. Don't put all the blame on that gypsy fortune-teller. I should have realized the state of mind he was in and I should have given up everything else in the world to help him weather the next year or so of doubt and distress."

The winter wore away, spring came and quickly melted into summer; the first anniversary of the unexplained disappearance of Oliver Baxter passed. Three months remained of the last year allotted to Oliver October by the gypsy "queen" on that wild, shrieking night in '90. But by this time practically everybody in Rumley was counting the days and jokingly reminding Oliver that his chances got better every day!

"I see by the paper this evening that your Uncle Horace has announced himself as a candidate for state senator," said Mr. Sage one evening as he sat enjoying his customary half hour on Sage's porch with Jane and Oliver.

"Well, I know one vote he will not get," said Oliver, "even if he is my uncle."

"I know of another," said the minister dryly.

"Why, daddy, I am really beginning to take quite a fancy to you," cried Jane delightedly. "Only last week you said he ought to be tarred and feathered for turning those two old Bannester women out of their house over at Pleasant Ridge."

"But he didn't turn them out," said Oliver quickly. "Somebody came along at the last minute and lent them the money to redeem their little house and farm."

"You don't really mean it, Oliver?" cried Mr. Sage. "That is good news—splendid news."

"I hate that old Gooch man," cried Jane.

"Jane, my dear, you really are becoming quite a vixen," remonstrated her father.

An automobile came to a sudden stop in front of the house, and an agile young man leaped out, leaving his engine running. He came up the walk with long strides.

"Say, Oliver, you old skate, I've been looking all over town for you," shouted Sammy Parr. "This isn't your night to call on Jane—don't you know that? Good evening, Jane. Evening, Mr. Sage. Say, the Bannesters told me all about you, you blamed old skate — mean Ollie, not you, Mr. Sage. Gee whiz, Ollie you certainly did throw the hooks into Uncle Horace this time, didn't you? You certainly—"

"What on earth are you talking about, Sammy?" cried Jane.

"Out with it, Sammy, out with it," counseled Mr. Sage, coming down the steps.

"Well, what do you think, Mr. Sage—what do you think? Why, this chump here is the guy that lent Mrs. Bannester the money to redeem her house."

"Oh, Oliver!" cried Jane. "Did you really do it? I could squeeze you to death for it. And you never told me—you never breathed a word—"

"It was only about a thousand dollars," mumbled Oliver.

"Sure it was," agreed Sam cheerfully. "But right there and then the destiny of the great American nation was shaped along new lines. The words were no sooner out of the mouth of old Mrs. Bannester when the boom was born! Yes, sir, at that very moment—"

"Oh, for the Lord's sake, Sammy, slow down! What the dickens are you driving at, anyhow? Boom? What boom?"

"Your boom, you idiot! The boom's been started for you as candidate for state senator against old man Gooch."

"Why, you darned chump," roared Oliver, "I'm not going to run for state senator or anything else. You must be crazy. I'll head it off tomorrow. I'll telephone—"

"Won't do you a darned bit of good," cried Sammy exultantly. "They'll nominate you, anyhow. Why, you're the only man in this county that would stand a ghost of a show, Ollie. And the best of all—popular nephew running against Shylock uncle! Gee whiz! I'm going down to see Al Wilson at the Despatch office. Put him wise and warn him not to let a word of it leak out in the paper till he gets the word. Night, Mr. Sage—so long, Jane."

"Wait a minute!" called out Oliver, springing to his feet as Sammy darted down the walk.

"Nix," shouted Sammy over his shoulder.

The three of them watched him in silence as he leaped into his car and began his swift, reckless turn in the narrow street.

"What are you going to do about it?" inquired the minister, the first to speak.

Jane did not give Oliver a chance to reply.

"Do about it?" she cried. "Why, he's going to run against old Gooch and beat the life out of him!"

Oliver looked up at her. She stood at the top of the steps, the light from the open door falling athwart her radiant face, half in shadow, half in the warm, soft glow. Suddenly his heart began to pound—heavy, smothering blows against his ribs that had the effect of making him dizzy, as with vertigo. He continued to stare, possessed of a strange wonder, as she turned to her tall, gray-haired parent and laid both hands on his shoulders.

"I wish I could say 'gee whiz" as Sammy says it," she cried. "I feel all over just like one great big 'gee whiz.' Don't you, daddy?"

The man of God took his daughter's firm, round chin between his thumb and forefinger and shook it lovingly. "One 'gee whiz' in the family is enough," said he. "I am glad you feel like one, however. You take me back 25 years, my dear. Your mother used to say 'gee whiz' when she felt like it. It is, after all, a rather harmless way of exploding."

Presently he left them and Jane spoke softly.

"Did you notice, Oliver, that he spoke of mother a little while ago? It was the first time in years. I wonder if I remind him of her in lots of ways."

Oliver's thoughts leaped backward a score of years and more. "I used to think she was the most wonderful person in all the world," he said. "I was very desperately in love with your mother when I was six or seven, Jane." He hesitated and then went on clumsily, almost fatuously: "I am beginning to think that you are like her in a lot of ways."

She gave him a quick, startled look. His face was turned away, and so he did not see the tender, wistful little smile that flickered on her lips, nor was he aware of the long, deep breath she took. From that moment a queer, uneasy restraint fell upon them. There were long silences, dreamy on her part, moody on his. He left shortly after 10; his "good-night" was strangely gruff and unnatural.

He was jealous. He knew it for a fact, he confessed it to himself for the first time openly and unreservedly. He was jealous of young Lansing. There was no use trying to deny it. He did not go so far as to think of himself as being in love with Jane—that would be ridiculous, after all the years they had known each other—but he bitterly resented the thought that she might be in love with some one else. Especially with the superior, supercilious, cocksure Lansing!

To Be Continued.

Cattle Men to Discuss Evil of Tuberculosis

Prominent Shippers From Middle Western States Will Meet In Omaha Next Month.

Omaha, Neb., May 25. (UP).—Prominent livestock men from Iowa, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska will meet here June 28 and 29 to formulate methods for furthering tuberculosis eradication among cattle.

The conference will be attended by health leaders and federal agricultural officials, according to A. H. Stryker, manager of the Omaha Livestock exchange, chairman of the meeting. The meeting has been called by the Midwest States Tuberculosis conference.

"The conference will discuss the necessity for eradicating tuberculosis," Stryker said, "from an economical as well as public health standpoint. The support of livestock breeders' association, diary development societies and state agricultural departments is being received to further the eradication program."

Among those who will participate in the conference are Carl Gray, president of the Union Pacific railroad; Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago, of the Wilson Packing company; Prof. H. R. Smith, livestock commissioner of Chicago; Dr. E .C. Steele, secretary of the Iowa veterinary medical association; and members of the staff, U. S. bureau of animal industry.

Mothers Advised to Regulate Child's Diet

Washington, May 25. — Children should be made to eat what is placed before them at the dining table and not allowed to choose their own diet, is the advice of the Home Economics Bureau of the Agriculture Department to mothers and fathers of the country.

"Eat it or leave it as you wish, there will be nothing else until breakfast tomorrow morning," the mother should strictly rule. The child who is allowed to leave his food on his plate a few times soon knows he has the upper hand, the department said.

Mass Fist Fighting, Popular in Russia, Stopped by Police

Moscow, May 25—Police have been forced to intervene to stop a revival of the ancient Russian institution of mass fist-fights known as "Kulatchnie Boy" which for centuries has been the chief means employed by Russian peasants to express their belligerency.

Summoned by a riot call a squad of militiamen found sixteen izvostchiks, or cab drivers, slugging methodically another set of sixteen izvostchiks. Two sturdy figures lay unconscious.

Half of the warriors succeeded in escaping.

Arraigned in court, the spokesman for the sixteen defendants declared "Life is too dull without a fight. What's the harm if we don't break any bones?"

Kansas City Stock Yards, May 24, 1926.

Lambs and Hogs Lower. Some Cattle Stronger.

Some of the medium and light weight cattle were quoted stronger, but the bulk of the arrivals of the medium to fairly good classes were no more than steady. Some prime 1100-steers sold at $10, as high as any sale this month. Calves were lower and stockers and feeders were strong. Hogs were down 10 to 15 cents compared with last week's close and 15 to 25 cents under the high point Friday. Sheep and lambs ranged from steady to 25 cents lower.

Today's Receipts.

Receipts today were 11,000 cattle; 10,000 hogs; and 12,000 sheep, compared with 10,000 cattle; 9,000 hogs, and 000 sheep a week ago, and 10,950 cattle, 15,150 hogs and 4,200 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle.

Some prime 1100-pound Nebraska steers sold at $10, as high as any sale this month. Other good to choice steers brought $9 to $9.50, and fair to good steers $8.50 up. The market was quoted steady to strong with the trade fairly active. Buyers were not very anxious for the heavy weight classes. In the quarantine division 28 car loads of grass fat steers sold at $6.10 to $6.85 and they were about steady with last week's close. Butcher cattle were uneven. Medium cows were weak and the common and choice kinds steady. Good to choice heifers were strong. Bulls were 15 to 25 cents lower, and calves off 50 cents. Choice light weight calves sold up to $12.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Trade in the stocker and feeder division was limited by the small supply. Prices were firm. Inquiry is large for this season of the year, but only part of the orders can be filled.

Hogs.

Hig prices last week were in the highest position of the past six years. Since then the market broke 15 to 25 cents of the loss coming today. Considering the high prices this break is small. Today 130 to 160 pound hogs sold at $14.15 to $1.25; 160 to 210 pounds, $14 to $14.15; 210 to 250 pounds $13.75 to $14; 250 to 300 pounds $13.35 to $13.75; packing sows $12 to $12.50; stags $11 to $11.50 and stock hogs and pigs, $14.25 to $15.25.

Sheep and Lambs.

Lambs broke 10 to 15 cents and sheep 15c to 25c today. This is the first setback the market has encountered in two weeks. Spring lambs sold at $16.25 to $16.85; shorn lambs, $15 to $15.25; shorn wethers, $8.50 to $8.65, and shorn ewes $6.50 to $7.50.

Horses and Mules.

Because of the small receipts, quotations for horses and mules are nominal. The few offered each week find ready outlet.

CLOSING GRAIN REVIEW.

Chicago, May 25.—Grain prices closed uneven on the Chicago Board of Trade today, after a dull session during which prices were easily influenced.

New May wheat closed sharply higher, but the old was fractionally off as was the September delivery. July remained unchanged from the previous close. Activity in May was light as large shipments of grain are still arriving and it is expected that there will be an ample supply to fulfill all contracts. News of some rain in North Dakota started some selling, but when it was learned how little and unimportant this was, prices rallied.

Corn closed fractionally lower in all positions, after a dull day. The weather is very favorable for this grain and a heavy movement to the market is expected just as soon as the farmers finish their work in the fields.

Oats continued to show little activity but maintained the firmest tone on the floor. May closed unchanged but the deferred deliveries were fractionally higher.

Provisions closed higher.

FEELING LOTS BETTER NOW

Writes Ethel May Snider Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hartford City, Ind.—Doing housework and taking care of a sick woman proved to be too much for Ethel May Snider, R. R. 1 of Hartford City, until she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overwork had so undermined her health that she had to give up all outside work, and when she saw this medicine advertised in the "Star" and other papers, she went to druggist and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She took it regularly, was greatly benefited and now feels very much better.

Ethel May Snider's experience is similar to that of thousands of other women in all walks of life, who have sent testimonials to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass.

Among those who praise the Compound are young girls who have been enabled to attend school regularly—working girls who have gained strength and endurance so necessary to them, housewives and mothers who have found that the tonic effect of the Compound has enabled them to perform their daily tasks more easily.

CATHOLICISM IN HUGE MEET

TO HONOR EUCHARIST

Giant Spiritual Congress, Held First In 1881, Comes to United States For First Time.

Chicago, May 25.—Chicago is making elaborate preparations to receive, entertain, shelter and feed 1,000,000 visitors from all over the world, who will come here to attend the Twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress from June 20 to 24.

The city is taking especial pride in the fact that Chicago has been chosen as the locale of the first International Eucharistic Congress to be held in the United States.

The civic bodies as well as non-Catholic organizations are giving their aid unreservedly to make this initial United States congress a gigantic success through their co-operation with the twenty-five committees in charge of the various aspects of the congress so that despite the sudden influx of an additional 1,000,000 persons, order and comfort will maintain.

Prepare for Visitors.

The Chicago Association of Commerce and the Hotel Owners' Association are working hand in hand with congress committees to provide accommodations for the visitors. The local transportation companies, steam, electric, surface and elevated as well as all bus lines are working harmoniously with the committees so that the visitors as well as residents of Chicago may be taken to and from the various scenes of the congress activities with the greatest order and comfort.

Hotels, restaurants and general dispensers of food are storing in their larders a copious supply of edibles so that none will be hungry.

Railroad companies are offering reduced fares. Steamship companies also are making special transportation prices for the visitors. Both railroad and steamship companies will provide food and lodging for the visitors. Boats will be moored to docks in Lake Michigan and along the Chicago River, and sleeping and dining cars will stand on side tracks for the accommodation of visitors. Homes of Catholics have been offered to visitors, and persons not of the Catholic faith have informed the housing committee of the congress that their homes also are available to care for the pilgrims.

A Big Welcome.

All of Chicago, industrial, civil and domestic has joined hands with the congress officials to make the material side of the congress a success. Visitors can be assured of a courteous and gallant welcome.

The Eucharistic Congress, itself, however, has as its sole object a spiritual aspect. It has been held every few years since 1881 for the purpose of offering homage to Christ, the Eucharistic King. Previous congresses have been held in the great capitals of Europe with the exception of one held in 1910 at Montreal, Canada. The practice was inspired by a pious woman named Marie Tamissier at Lille, France. Because of the success of the first, a second was held at Avignon, and because of its success, others followed until the twenty-eighth is to be held in Chicago. Each year the number of pilgrims to these congresses has increased. Thus the figures are placed at 1,000,000 for Chicago's congress.

The spiritual aspect consists of the reception by the faithful of Holy Communion or as it is also called, Holy Eucharist, on the opening day of the congress and as many other dates throughout the congress as one chooses.

World Lecturers.

Sermons on the Holy Eucharist as well as papers and lectures will be delivered by orators from all over the world to people of different tongues.

Roman Catholics have devout honor for the Holy Eucharist, because the sacrament is believed to be the foundation of the Roman Catholic religion.

The word "Eucharist" is taken from two Greek words, "eu" meaning "well" or "greatly," and "chairo," meaning "to rejoice"; hence, it may be understood as "the great rejoicing," a suitable meaning. But as the giving of thanks is attended by interior joy, the word acquired the sense of thanksgiving. The historical origin of the religious meaning of the word is found in the Gospel of St. Luke, (xxii., 19): "And taking bread, He gave thanks . . ." Here the word used for the latter phrase in the original Greek text is "Eucharistesas," and so "Eucharist" came into the language to indicate the act there narrated of instituting the sacrament of the body and blood of Jesus Christ, as also the sacrament itself.

The congress ceremonies will begin Sunday, June 20, at high noon with the celebration of pontificial high mass by His Eminence, John Cardinal Bonzano, papal delegate, at the Cathedral of the Holy Name. About twenty-five cardinals and hundreds of archbishops, bishops, monsignori, priests, members of religious orders, will attend this mass.

Masses in Many Churches.

Simultaneous with the celebration of mass at the cathedral by the papal delegate, masses will be said in each of the 350 Catholic churches throughout the archdiocese with the laiety attending.

On Monday at Soldier Field, Cardinal Bonzano will celebrate the "Mass of the Angels," during which 60,000 children of the parochial schools of Chicago will sing the responses and parts of the mass proper.

Mass will be celebrated in the open again at Soldier Field on Tuesday and Wednesday with hierarchy of the church and laiety attending.

On Thursday the scenes will move to Mundelein, Ill., forty miles northwest of Chicago, where the papal degate will celebrate mass on the campus of St. Mary of the Lake Seminary, the largest, and said to be the most beautifully appointed seminary in the United States.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be given here also, and it is estimated that nearly a half-million persons will receive Holy Communion from the hands of 3,000 priests who will assist in the distribution.

Following Benediction, there will be a gigantic procession, which will be made up of the hierarchy of the church attired in distinctive robes of their office, and the laiety. The procession will be headed by Cardinal Bonzano carrying the Sacred Host in an Ostensorium beneath a golden canopy borne by papal guards and Knights of St. Gregory. The procession will wend its way around the three-mile shore line of St. Mary Lake in the seminary grounds, starting and concluding at the seminary chapel. Choirs will be stationed at intervals around the lake so that a continuous chant may be maintained throughout the entire procession.

Baptists to Fight on Immersion Doctrine

Amendment Directed At Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick's Church Is Expected To Arouse Convention.

Washington, May 25.—One of the important issues to come before the Northern Baptist Convention starting today here is consideration of a proposed amendment which seeks to exclude from the fellowship of the denomination those churches which receive members from other evangelical denominations without re-baptism by immersion.

This proposed amendment worded apparently to define what constitutes a Baptist church, was in reality aimed to exclude the Park Avenue Baptist Church of New York City and its pastor, the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who accepted the call of the church on condition that open church membership be practiced.

The amendment will likely meet with determined opposition. If accepted, it would exclude this New York church and many other churches in various parts of the country which have practiced some form of open membership for years.

The law committee, to which the amendment was referred after the Seattle convention last year, has reported that the proposed amendment would be illegal since it would invalidate the agreement entered into some years ago between the denomination and the Free Baptists, whos custom was the admission of unimmersed members. However, a minority report of the law committee will likely be made holding the legality of the amendment.

An attempt has been made recently to bring the opposing sides together in a compromise amendment, which would not exclude these open-membership churches. How successful it will be remains to be seen. Opposition to it from some leaders has already been voiced. The proposed amendment has in support of it some of the extreme conservative leaders who see in it a means to exclude from the fellowship of the convention the more liberal churches and pastors, including the Park avenue church and its pastor, Dr. Fosdick, who is a leading modernist.

Hitherto each local church has exercised supreme authority over matters of this kind, and to have the convention legislate on the matter will mean a radical change from the traditional policy, with liberal leaders supporting the traditional practice. The outcome will be awaited with much interest.

The COLONIAL radiator

a trap to hold heat

The big crescent-shaped radiator on the Colonial hangs low and at the rear. In old-style furnaces the radiator is above the furnace.

Heated gases and smoke are forced downward in the Colonial radiator. There is a long, big-surface passageway that must be traveled. Heat cannot rush up the chimney. It is held and absorbed by the radiator walls.

In this way the Colonial traps and saves the heat that the furnace makes. A warmer house with less fuel burned is the result.

Especially suited for oil burner installations. See your nearest dealer

"Lively Heat"
A Triumph of modern oil stove construction!

Red Star engineers found a way to produce "Lively Heat" in an oil stove. The Red Star "Lively Heat" burner converts common kerosene or gasoline into a gaseous vapor, which is then burned and produces the same "Lively Heat" as coal, gas, or electricity. Naturally, there are no wicks or wick substitutes.
